

Nicole Witt

SHORT FORM BIOGRAPHY

Nicole Witt is a nationally-touring, award-winning Nashville songwriter and multi-instrumentalist known for her soaring melodies and clever turns of phrase. The songs she has written for artists such as Lee Brice, Rodney Atkins, Kenny Rogers, George Strait, Lauren Alaina, and Ellie Holcomb have brought her national acclaim in country, bluegrass and Christian music. In 2011, Witt received the International Bluegrass Song of the Year Award. In 2014, she was nominated by the Gospel Music Association for Country Song of the Year. Witt is currently composing the score for a short film titled “Black Mountain” and recently contributed two songs to the album of up-and-coming Big Machine artist, Tara Thompson. With a voice that conveys a level of emotion and sincerity scarce in modern music, Witt is one of four members in the hot new country girl band, Farewell Angelina.
